Roundstone Announces Relocation of Headquarters to Lakewood, Ohio

Roundstone announces the relocation of its corporate offices into historic building in Lakewood, Ohio.

WESTLAKE, Ohio – Roundstone announced today that it will move its company headquarters to 15422 Detroit Road, Lakewood, Ohio. The building is the former First Church of Christ Scientist, and is registered as a National Historic Landmark.

Construction of the building began in 1913 by Chicago-based Architect Charles Draper Faulkner, working in the Neoclassical style. Despite being converted to office space in 2005, original details remain throughout the building, including Doric columns, cathedral ceilings and open space. Additionally, the building now boasts many modern features, such as a training facility, gym, employee lounge, collaboration spaces, street-level terraces and greenspace.

“We are really excited to make the move to downtown Lakewood. The walkable neighborhood and easy access to restaurants, shopping and entertainment will be an added perk for all of our employees,” says Roundstone President and Founder Michael Schroeder. “We’ve grown a lot as a company in recent years and the additional space, along with the vibrant neighborhood, will enhance our continued growth.”

The 23,000-square-foot building will be approximately twice the size of the current location. The company is planning additional renovations over the next six months.

Relocation is expected to be complete by summer 2016.
